INTRODUCTION

---

The third edition of the Florence POST-CROI has changed its location with the new title "Bologna POST-CROI", due to happen on March 1,2 2017.

The objective of our Conference remains to offer a platform of knowledge and discussion to those who normally have not the opportunity to participate, in person, to the important American event, which annually selects and discusses the scientific cutting-edge themes regarding Retroviruses and related opportunistic infections.

Our Convention stands as a valid and reliable opportunity to explore duly, with the mediation of the authoritative contributions of experts the most important news and progressions of research emerged from the sections selected by the scientific committee of CROI.

We intended thus to respond to all wishes and solicitations addressed to the organizers from the participants who attended the previous editions, held in 2015 and 2016. They widely expressed in fact their appreciation on the high scientific quality of the critical explorations proposed in real time of the news and controversies arisen during the US Retrovirus Conference.

The interactive review of the clinical sessions, discussed in a videoconference with the Johns Hopkins University's experts, will interpose with Round Tables and Lectures focusing on current epidemiological, clinical and therapeutical aspects.

Special focus will be pointed on the increasing importance of co-morbidities related to chronic features of HIV infection and antiretroviral therapy.

The promoter of our POST CROI initiatives, MISI Foundation, is aware of and encourages the increasing interest met by the event among young clinicians and postgraduates normally involved in HIV related preventive and clinical activities.

The presence in the faculty of many experts from Europe and from Johns Hopkins University, allows to analyse with realistic awareness the credibility of what is essentially the elective goal of our initiative: the prospective elimination of endemoepidemic of HIV, optimal management of co-infections and related co-morbidities through education, prevention and the broader and differentiated commitment on the current antiviral therapies.
